

A BRAND NEW QUARTZ SURFACE JOINS THE INDUSTRIAL URBAN AESTHETIC

Oxidised steel, weathered cement, rough-hewn timber are the new stars of domestic kitchen design – and Caesarstone's very latest quartz surface both emulates and enhances the look.

The new industrial urban kitchen aesthetic inspired Caesarstone to create the world's first weathered, textured quartz surface characterised by the bold patinas of casting and oxidising. Excava, from the Metropolitan collection, cleverly combines the beautifully raw features of rust and concrete in a low-reflective matte surface finish.

Evoking the sense of decaying stone, weathered by time and nature, Excava is a sublime, layered mix of warm taupes, rusts, copper and deep browns. Its rough concrete finish has a subtle coarseness yet cleaning is effortless, as with all Caesarstone surfaces.

Ideal partners for this look are timber or concrete floors, stainless steel or iron fittings and leather seating. Soft, greyed blues and greens for painted or tiled walls are the perfect counterbalance. And as with other industrial materials, Excava's inherent characteristics are strength, longevity and durability. It's a material designed to last and retain its sublime good looks for a lifetime and more.

Excava, from the Caesarstone Metropolitan collection, is available nationally. Go to www.caesarstone.com.au for more details.
