STEAL THE RECIPE!!

A DELICIOUS MIX OF NATURAL INGREDIENTS

CREATES A STAR KITCHEN!

A love of Mediterranean style and a predilection for hand-made and natural finishes were the inspiration for Melbourne Designer Georgia Ezra's family home.

An historic building, untouched for decades, gave Georgia the scope to introduce a contemporary U-shaped kitchen with an inspired mix of pale timber, Moroccan zellige ceramic tiles, Caesarstone quartz surfaces, hemp burlap and limewash paint.

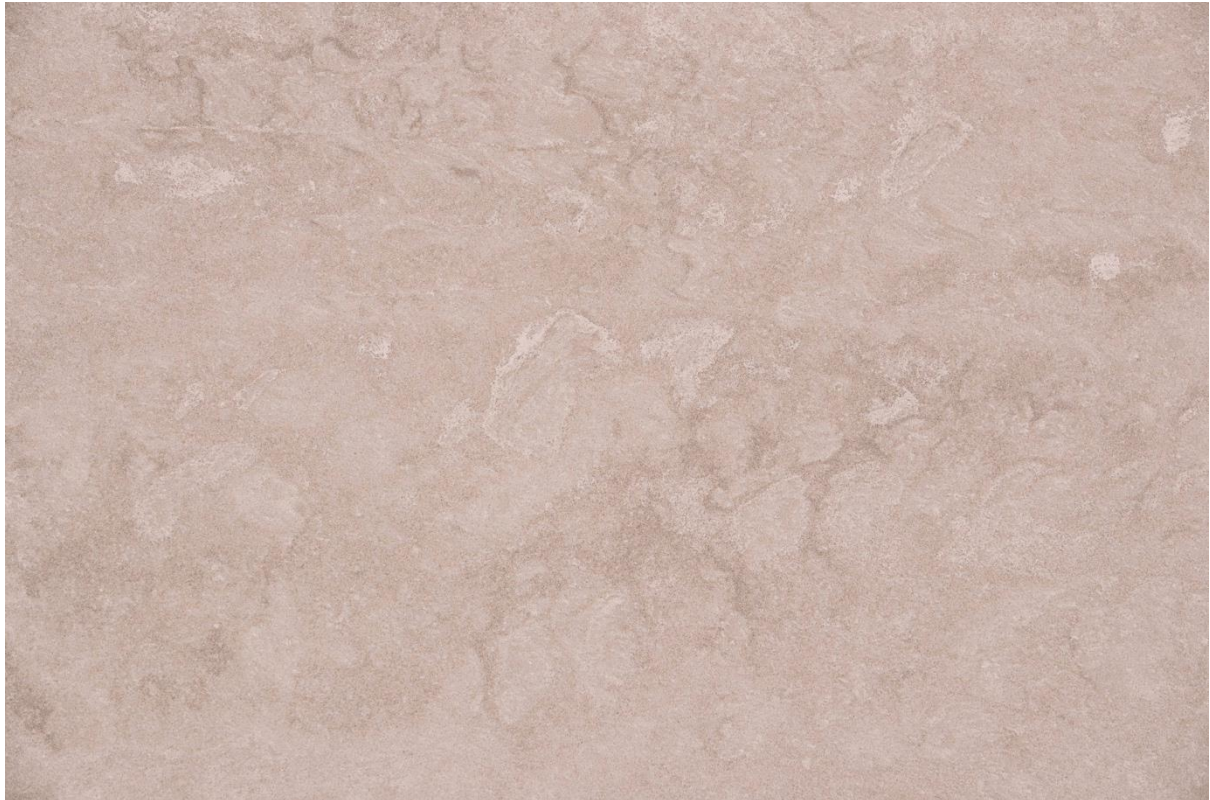

The palette is one of warm, earthy tones that exudes ‘natural’ and handmade, yet overall the look is very tailored and refined.

“I wanted to create a bespoke look, inspired by two of my favourite places on the planet – Morocco and Spain. But overall, functionality was at the forefront of the design,” said Georgia Ezra of Studio Ezra.

The kitchen’s traditional work triangle encompasses lush garden views from the sink and has at its focal point a solid oak work island. The minimalist cabinets are inlaid with a subtle grasscloth that softens some of the other harder materials. The workbench surfaces are Caesarstone Topus Concrete, a beautiful soft oatmeal hue with a patina comprising mineral formations found in nature – the sublime, almost delicate surface belies its strength and durability.

“I chose Caesarstone for its resilience – I can relax about everyday wear and tear that comes with a young family and not worry about damaging or staining of the surfaces,” said Georgia.

Like other Caesarstone surfaces, Topus Concrete is both heat and scratch-resistant, easy to clean and will never require sealing.

Caesarstone is committed to the highest safety and environmental standards and carries the ISO 14001 international standard for environmental management and performance.
